

Actual Quote from article:

“Women have always been healers. They were the unlicensed doctors and anatomists of western history. They were abortionists, nurses and counselors. They were pharmacists, cultivating healing herbs and exchanging the secrets of their uses.”

Paraphrase (and quote) containing in-text citation:

The history of women in healing and medicine is rich, with women working in a variety of healthcare settings. “They were abortionists, nurses and counselors. They were pharmacists, cultivating healing herbs and exchanging the secrets of their uses” (Ehrenreich, English, 2013).

Actual Quote from article:

“Today, however, health care is the property of male professionals. Ninety-three percent of the doctors in the US are men; and almost all the top directors and administrators of health institutions. Women are still in the overall majority—70 percent of health workers are women—but we have been incorporated as workers into an industry where the bosses are men. We are no longer independent practitioners, known by our own names, for our own work. We are, for the most part, institutional fixtures, filling faceless job slots: clerk, dietary aide, technician, maid.”

Paraphrase containing in-text citation:

Women today may still be found working in a wide variety of medical jobs. However, the role of women been denigrated from solo practitioner to supportive roles (Ehrenreich, English, 2013).
